The forging of an alliance. Or how I became the ambassador between r/hermitcraft and 2b2t.

It all started with XQC's raid, MCC2 had been severely damaged and we were helping both them and Brazil recover at the same time. Just as Brazil recovered, Argentina was attacked by the same void as Brazil had been. Our resources were stretched thin and XQC was publicly targeting purple icons, just like H3, our neighbour. I was looking at the map and realised that to attack H3, XQC would either have to come upwards through stonks or down through green lattice and 2b2t; that was when I had the idea to ask them for assistance.

My suggestion did not have a negative reception so I hopped into their server and saw that they too were extremely worried about the XQC threat although they were expressing it in their own way. I sent a message in their server saying "Hello 2b2t people, I'm from the hermitcraft community and we'd like to ask if you want to help us against XQC's attacks. They are attacking anything with a lot of purple in it which means there is a high chance that they try to blast through us in an attempt to get to h3." I was immediately responded to with "If they get to us we are f-d" and pinged with the words "Hermitcraft cool" then, just as XQC started to come towards the GMT line, I was pinged with a message saying that they would help us should we get attacked. I came back to the hermitcraft discord and said that they had agreed to help us which was met with a positive reaction, XQC moved to target star wars and everything seemed like it was calming down.

I then received word that there were plans to create a void core right next to 2b2t's logo. They had several allies around their area and so were quite worried about what would happen; I decided to go back to the Hermitcraft discord and get help defending them since they had promised to help us. We started whiting out the void whilst they kept their logo safe and helped their allies, then they sent me an image of what they planned to put in the space so we worked around it and the void core was quickly destroyed.

The Asmongold attacks and the almost-destruction of 2b2t on r/place.

The evening after the creation of the alliance, a void core was created right on the edge of green lattice; the 2b2t people were worried but had faith in their bots. We were watching them and they seemed to be doing badly and so I went into their server to offer assistance and it was readily accepted.

They had been wiped by an unknown streamer but were quickly recovering then, Asmongold decided that he wanted that space for his art. The 2b2t guys discussed just leaving and rebuilding elsewhere but ultimately decided to remain and hold their ground. Fortunately, they managed to get through to Asmongold on his stream and convince him to move his logo over so that it wouldn't damage theirs.

This did not last for long however as, due to a large amount of misinformation, Asmongold's fans started attacking 2b2t against the words of the streamer, things were looking bleak for 2b2t as their logo was rapidly vanishing. We immediately put helping 2b2t as a top priority, saving the new colours for later. I went over and told them and it was met with a lot of positivity and thanks from various 2b2t people. With us defending and helping rebuild and 2b2t people spamming Asmongold’s chat to get him to call off his fans, the 2b2t logo slowly recovered and was eventually fully restored.